HOME TEAM

That of Torino is, in some ways, the very history of Italian football.

In the city of Turin, in fact, football arrived at the end of the nineteenth century, thanks to the initiative of Swiss and English industrialists, the real turning point for the team came on December 3, 1906, at the Voigt brewery (today Bar Norman) in Via Pietro Micca, there the Football Club Torino was founded, considered by many the oldest football club in Italy.

The first official match was played on December 16, 1906 in Vercelli against Pro Vercelli, 3-1 for the granata. The first season of the "Novo" era was a year of study. Defender Piacentini and center forward Franco Ossola arrived: Varese let him go for as much as 55,000 lire, a significant sum for the market of the time. After 15 years Torino won the championship again, the first of five consecutive titles. In the 1942/43 season the Toro also won the second Italian Cup with an unprecedented record: 5 victories in 5 matches against Anconetana, Atalanta, Milan, Roma and Venezia, 20 goals scored and 0 conceded.

The match against Benfica was a true friendly, the granata team defeated 4-3 with great applause for captain Ferreira who was retiring from football, in a stadium packed with forty thousand people... The following day, on May 4, the entire team boarded the three-engine plane I-Elce to return home, the weather was terrible with low clouds and pouring rain, after the last contact with the radio station, perhaps due to the bad weather or a fault in the altimeter, the plane crashed against the Basilica of Superga, shrouded in thick fog, it was 5:05 p.m. on May 4, 1949.

Novo still as president, restarted from the youth sector to prepare, in the 1949/50 season, a dignified Torino. It was in the 1975/76 season that the Granata, leaving their rival Juve second, would return to triumph with their 7th and last championship title.
