UNIVERSITY OF AMSTERDAM

Explanation - Consent sharing personal data and data protection by destination

In short

Attention! If you want to participate in an exchange programme at this partner university, you should be aware that different privacy safeguards apply compared to those within the European Economic Area (EEA). This means your personal data may be less protected. Therefore, the UvA needs your explicit consent to complete your registration. Below, we inform you about the risks and ask for your consent.

On page 4 you will find an explanation of the data protection classification and from page 5 you will find an overview of all destinations, including the level of data protection applicable to each destination.

Important information about your exchange outside the EEA

You have indicated that you want to participate in an exchange programme outside the EEA. Within the EEA, your privacy is protected under the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR). For some countries outside the EEA, the EU has determined that an adequate level of protection applies. Data sharing with these countries is permitted. In other cases, additional privacy measures are required, such as signing the Standard Contractual Clauses (SCC). However, some partner universities cannot sign these due to their own policies or legislation. In such cases, the UvA needs students consent to complete the registration.

For the destination you are considering, your personal data will be less protected than you are used to in the Netherlands. It is important to be aware of this. Below, we inform you about the risks and ask for your consent so we can complete your registration.

What does this mean for you?

If you decide to participate in this exchange programme, the UvA will share your personal data with the partner university. The data includes:

- Full name
- Date of birth
- Nationality
- Email address
- Study progress
- Field of study

For these destinations, the above personal data and your privacy will be less protected than you are used to in the Netherlands.

Risks

The specific risks depend on the legislation in the country of the chosen partner university. To give you an idea, here is a list of possible risks:

- No or limited privacy rights: In some countries outside the EEA, you may have no or limited ability to exercise your privacy rights. For example, you may not be able to request access to your data, make corrections, or enforce deletion.

- No independent supervisory authority: In many countries, there is no authority overseeing the protection of personal data. This means there is no authority to handle complaints or enforce actions in case of privacy violations.
- Access by local authorities without safeguards: In some countries, governments or intelligence agencies can access personal data without judicial review or without informing you. This could mean your data is accessed for security purposes without your knowledge or ability to contest it.
- No or less stringent data protection rules: The country of the receiving university may not have comparable privacy legislation or supervisory authority as within the EEA. This often means there are no binding agreements on how long data is retained, with whom it can be shared, or for what purposes it can be used. Security measures may also be less stringent (e.g., no encryption, limited access control, or no mandatory reporting of data breaches). This increases the risk of unwanted data transfer, data breaches, or misuse of sensitive data, which can lead to identity fraud, unwanted profiling, or reputational damage with possible consequences for your studies or career.

What privacy agreements have been made with the partner university?

The fact that no SCC are signed does not mean that no arrangements are made regarding your personal data. The UvA aims to put minimum privacy arrangements in place with all institutions. In short, these include:

- The partner university processes personal data according to the laws and regulations of the country in which it is located.
- Data is only processed for predetermined, specific purposes.
- If the partner university is legally required to share data with a third party, it ensures that the third party also complies with applicable laws and regulations.
- The partner university reports any data breaches to the UvA.
- You retain certain privacy rights (such as access and correction), which you can also exercise with this university.
- Data is not retained longer than necessary for the purpose for which it was collected.

If you want to know what kind of agreements the UvA is making or has made with the partner university of your choice, or if you want to know more about privacy and GDPR agreements, please contact the international office of your faculty. See "Your orientation on an exchange" and select your UvA study programme.

Consent

Since the partner university cannot or will not sign SCC due to restrictions arising from the applicable privacy laws and regulations in the respective country, it is not possible to protect your personal data according to European regulations. Therefore, the UvA can only share your personal data if you give explicit consent. If you do not give this consent, the UvA cannot share your data with the partner university and cannot complete your registration for this destination.

How do you give consent?

In the application form, you can enter your top 1-5 destinations. After filling in your details, you can submit your choices. Only at the relevant destinations will a message appear asking you to consent to the sharing of your personal data. If you do not give this consent, you will be asked to choose another destination.

You can withdraw your consent at any time. However, please note that if your exchange has already started, your data may have already been shared, and we may not always be able to prevent further use.

Withdrawing your consent may also affect the administrative handling of your study results. We will assess on a case-by-case basis how best to handle your request.

Note: The general rule is that if you decide to withdraw after placement, you are not entitled to replacement to another destination. If you have objections to giving explicit consent and therefore want to reconsider your exchange spot, this is not considered a valid reason for replacement.

Important to know: there are alternatives

The UvA offers many other exchange opportunities, for example, to countries within the EEA or to partner universities outside the EEA that have signed the SCC. You do not have to choose this specific destination if you are uncomfortable with the risks. To help you make an informed choice, the UvA has created an overview in which all destinations are categorised based on the level of data protection.

On page 4 you will find an explanation of the data protection classification and from page 5 you will find an overview of all destinations, including the level of data protection applicable to each destination.

Questions?

If you want to know more about the processing of your personal data by the UvA and your privacy rights, please consult our privacy page.

Feel free to contact the international office of your faculty if you want to know more about the risks or your rights. See "Your orientation on an exchange" and select your UvA study programme.

Risk overview by destination and privacy agreements

Sharing personal data with countries within and outside the European Economic Area (EEA) is subject to strict laws and regulations. Within the EEA, the protection of personal data is guaranteed through the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR). Different agreements apply outside the EEA. To help you make an informed choice, the UvA has categorised destinations into four categories based on the level of data protection:

1. Countries within the EEA

The exchange of personal data with partner universities within the EEA is fully covered under the GDPR. There is an equivalent level of data protection.

2. Countries outside the EEA with an adequacy decision

The European Commission has determined that certain countries outside the EEA provide an adequate level of data protection. Data sharing with partner universities in these countries is therefore permitted under the GDPR.

3. Countries outside the EEA without an adequacy decision – with SCC

For countries without an adequacy decision, data sharing is only possible with additional safeguards. The most commonly used safeguard is the signing of Standard Contractual Clauses (SCC): model contracts from the European Commission. Partner universities that have signed these SCC provide an adequate level of protection.

4. Countries outside the EEA without an adequacy decision – without SCC

Some partner universities outside the EEA do not sign the SCC due to internal university policies or national/regional legislation. In these cases, the UvA has made alternative agreements to protect personal data as much as possible. However, there remains a limited risk with these destinations.

Therefore, the UvA explicitly requests your consent before registering you for this destination and sharing your data.

Overview of UvA Destinations
The overview is divided into two sections. The first section lists the destinations that comply with the applicable privacy safeguards. The final pages cover the destinations for which explicit consent is required.
Please note:

- No rights may be derived from this document.
- Some destinations may be closed for a particular application year.
- Destination availability may vary between application rounds.
- Some destinations are available only to students in specific programmes or fields of study.
- Not all destinations are available to master's students.
- Destinations requiring explicit consent are listed on the final pages of this document.
