DESCRIPTION

The Ugly Duckling is a reputable freehold public house located in a semi-rural position on the outskirts of Telford, Shropshire. The property occupies a prominent roadside site and has been modernised to support a food-led hospitality business with additional guest accommodation.

THE OPPORTUNITY

The Ugly Duckling presents a great opportunity for both new and experienced operators looking to take on a well-regarded hospitality business. The business benefits from a loyal customer base and consistent demand, particularly for its popular brunch and event offerings.

The site is well-presented and sits on a spacious plot in the Shropshire countryside, offering room for further development or diversification. With multiple income streams already in place, the business is turn key with opportunities for expansion.

INTERNAL DETAILS

Following a comprehensive refurbishment, the property presents a modern and welcoming environment across its restaurant and bar areas. The main dining space is arranged in an open-plan format with a combination of standard and booth seating, while an adjacent lounge offers a more relaxed setting suited to informal gatherings. A dedicated function room, positioned alongside the main trading areas, includes its own bar and food servery and is regularly used for private events.

The premises are supported by a fully equipped commercial kitchen, with associated preparation areas and separate male and female WCs.

On the first floor, five letting bedrooms provide varied accommodation, comprising one king-size room, two doubles, and two twins. Each room includes an en-suite bathroom and flat-screen television. The floor also includes a manager's flat with a double bedroom.

The basement level houses a beer cellar and dedicated beer drop area.
