

Review of the Event: My Job – My Future 25.1.22

By Maximilian Betta Posada – INF2A

Introduction

The event “My job – My future” was organized by and for the 2nd and 3rd year Information Technology classes, and moderated by our professors Louise Lang and Thomas Kuen. The objective of the event was to get IT students in touch with professionals in various fields of the IT sector whose experiences could help inspire young minds aiming for the same career. Through an online interview, five experts shared their career growth and knowledge with our students who had the opportunity to learn about their future careers from the people that know best.

Event details

The event took place on Tuesday 25th January in virtual form and involved an introduction of five IT experts who live and work away from their hometowns: Olivia Maaghul, Alberto Nipoti, Noemi Pala, Patrick Agreiter and Peter Schönhardt. They shared their experiences of being IT professionals and how they achieved their positions. They were interviewed and by listening to their honest answers this allowed the students to get to know them better and to understand how they tackled the challenges they have faced. They answered questions taken directly from the students, explained details about their field of IT and how to become better at it giving lots of useful advice to everyone involved.

Opinion

It was a great chance to learn from these five individuals and hear their personal experiences. As students we learned a lot about our future careers and how to approach the challenges of the future.

Conclusion

In summary, it was a useful event carried out by students and professors with the aim of learning more about the IT sector from experts working in a variety of dynamic environments.
