Mind over Money

Why your brain wasn't built for money (and how to fix it)

By Holly Mead

It took millions of years for humans to evolve to walk, talk and think logically. So it's no wonder so many of us haven't quite got to grips with pensions and credit cards yet. We're wired to seek safety, avoid uncertainty and grab rewards when we see them. But it's possible to change that. The same ancient instincts that trip us up financially can also be turned into powerful tools.

Drawing on her experience as a money journalist, Holly Mead blends behavioural science, expert insight and real-world data to uncover the biggest biases evolution has landed us with. She reveals how they quietly influence everything from daily spending to long-term investing — and, crucially, how to outsmart them.

With clear explanations and hands-on exercises, Mind over Money helps you work with your brain, not against it — giving you the tools, confidence and habits you need to be better with money.

Holly Mead was deputy money editor at The Times & Sunday Times and launched and hosted The Times's Feel Better About Money podcast, which was a finalist for three broadcast and podcast awards. She writes for The Telegraph, Financial Times, The Times and The Guardian. She was previously Head of Editorial EMEA for Morningstar.

The Power of Self Doubt

How to turn uncertainty into strength, confidence, and success

By Luke Tobin

A must-read for anyone fed up with self-doubt and is ready to step into their full potential.

What if the voice you've spent your whole life trying to silence is actually the one thing trying to push you forward? Everyone feels self-doubt. But what most people never learn is that doubt isn't a flaw in your confidence, it's the fuel for your next level.

Drawing on psychology, performance science and the real, unfiltered story of his own rise, fall, reinvention and growth, Tobin shows how moments of doubt are not proof you're failing... but proof you're expanding. Through Luke's groundbreaking archetype model, the Mouse, the Lion, the Clown, and the Elephant, you'll learn to recognise the patterns behind your doubt, understand what they're trying to tell you, and turn them into practical tools for clarity, courage, and momentum. This isn't a book about "banishing fear" or pretending to be confident. It's a playbook for moving forward while you feel it.

Tobin is a multi-award-winning entrepreneur. He scaled his last business, Digital Ethos, into one of the UK's fastest-growing digital marketing agencies and won the Great British Entrepreneur Award in 2020. He founded the Unusual Group, which acquires minority stakes in marketing agencies, creative firms, and tech companies and runs Tobin Capital, investing in future-focused ventures across female-led brands, space, sustainability, deep tech, and biotech.

The Trick Is Not Minding That It Hurts

What Nobody Tells You About Power, Money, and Winning in Business

By Lee McCabe

A blunt, unsentimental field guide that cuts through corporate performance to reveal how the business system actually works and how to survive it.

Business isn't fair. Meritocracy is largely a fiction. The people who talk like sages are usually improvising behind the scenes, and the gap between the official version of how companies work and what actually happens inside them is exactly where careers are built—or quietly ended. The Trick Is Not Minding That It Hurts is the book that lives in that gap.

After two decades inside the world's most competitive environments—including senior leadership roles at Facebook, Alibaba, and Expedia, followed by years in the private equity trenches—Lee McCabe has seen how power is built, how decisions are really made, and why the “official story” is often the most dangerous one to believe. If you are ready to stop being naive and start navigating the real world of business, this is your guide.

McCabe is a global growth executive with over two decades of experience in highly competitive, high-pressure business environments. He has worked at the intersection of technology, capital, and strategy, navigating corporate politics and decision-making at the highest levels of big tech and private equity.

How AI Will Move Markets

Reconsidering the investment landscape as AI evolves

By Alasdair Nairn

Also by the same author:

An authoritative examination of the impact of AI on financial markets, from the author of the investing classic Engines That Move Markets.

Artificial Intelligence has been a futurist dream for decades but has finally come of age as the many barriers to its implementation have been overcome. This 'new technology' has been at least 80 years in the making and suffered its fair share of disappointments along the way, as progress failed to match expectations. Now, however, the elements are in place for it not only to match these expectations but, in due course, to exceed them. Rapid advances in both hardware and software are producing ever better and more powerful solutions. At the same time, it is clear that most people still have a limited understanding of what AI really is and what it is capable of achieving. Nairn draws on his 40 years of experience to put the history and future of AI in context: an expert account of how AI will change our lives, while also stimulating debate about the opportunities and dangers this latest technological revolution will bring.

Nairn has been a professional investor in global equities for over 40 years. He manages the Global Opportunities Trust, a UK listed investment trust with Goodhart Partners. He is an early-stage investor personally in a number of different companies, including AI and signal processing ventures, and is the Chairman of Malted AI. He is a Visiting Professor at the University of Strathclyde and was elected as a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh.

The Art and Science of Trading

How to combine intuition and rules when trading globally in equities, ETFs and crypto

By Robert Carver

Also by the same author:

The Art and Science of Trading reveals why the world's best traders – whether intuitive artists or systematic scientists – all follow the same proven rules. Carver sets out the fundamental rules which distinguish good traders from bad ones and guides you to adopting these winning practices.

Some traders are artists, using purely intuitive methods to decide when to trade. Others are scientists, trading systematically with no room for human judgment. Among the very best traders in the world, you will find both discretionary artists and systematic scientists. So, what distinguishes good traders from bad ones? Good traders all follow certain rules. These rules are virtually the same for all outstanding traders, regardless of their preference for intuition or algorithms. The key rules are scientific – they are underpinned by the mathematics and financial theory which systematic traders are well versed in, and successful artistic traders also follow instinctively.

This book is an authoritative yet applicable guide to combining art and science when trading. Part of a successful trading strategy can be purely artistic – down to your intuition. It could also be entirely scientific. But however you trade, you must always follow certain key, scientifically grounded rules.

Carver is a trader and bestselling author. He is a visiting lecturer at Queen Mary, University of London, and a research advisor for Stylus Digital; a hedge fund trading cryptocurrencies.
