Overview

This standard is being developed for those who wish to join the hospitality and catering sector or for those currently in the industry and are wanting to advance their career from a production chef to a senior production chef.

Production chefs lead teams and often support the head chef within larger establishments. They work in time-bound and often challenging kitchen environments in education, health and social care, the military and commercial/food retail.

Senior production chefs have accountability for the day-to-day running of the kitchen service, producing, monitoring and maintaining consistent food standards, legislative requirements and quality across all areas and during all stages of production and supply.

The Programme Structure

The end point assessment period will only commence when the employer is satisfied that the learner is working to the operational standards.

Once through the gateway, the assessment methods will be planned and booked with the Highfield Scheduling Team.
