Working in the health and social care sectors

The health and social care sectors currently employ approximately 1 in 10 of the working population in the UK. These sectors cover a range of services across many organisations within the public, private and voluntary sectors, including hospitals, hospices, nursing, care homes and many other types of provision.

Your apprentice's journey

Ready for training

- Initial assessment
- English and maths training (optional for 19+, please see funding rules)
- On-programme training to meet the requirements of the standard
- Gateway readiness self-assessment

Set for assessment on completion of training and functional skills

On completion of training and functional skills

End-point assessment methods are:

Observation of practice with questions

- A 90-minute observation followed by 30-minutes for questions
- Observing the apprentice completing their normal duties in the workplace

Professional discussion underpinned by a portfolio of evidence

- A 60-minute professional discussion
- Underpinned by a portfolio of evidence, which is not assessed

Go further

After a period of working and gaining experience, apprentices may be able to work towards an assistant practitioner or nursing associate post or, providing they meet the entry requirements, apply to university to become a registered healthcare practitioner.
