BAR & RESTAURANT

Step into the old-world charm of a traditional Dublin pub at Nancy Hands. With its sweeping staircase, stained glass windows, and cosy parlour bar, this iconic spot captures the true spirit of Irish hospitality. Located just around the corner from Heuston Station and the Phoenix Park, Nancy Hands is a must-visit bar in Dublin's historic Stoneybatter district. Famed for its traditional Irish food, live music, and warm, authentic atmosphere. Just a stone's throw from the Guinness Brewery, Nancy Hands carries a story as rich as its stout. The pub dates back to the late 18th century and takes its name from Nancy, Ireland's first female publican.

Good For – Nancy Hands is the perfect spot for team dinners, welcome receptions, film and media events, and lively wedding Day Two celebrations. With hearty Irish fare, a warm local atmosphere, and plenty of character, it's ideal for tourist group meals and live sports events.

THE LEGAL EAGLE

The Legal Eagle sits in the shadow of our glorious river and the formidable and iconic Four Courts. We look to the old traditions of pickles, roasts, meaty joints and braises but we choose also to honour our own traditional lexicon of local, Irish producers where possible and allowing our guests to enjoy a lighter style of dining. We are crazy about beer, whiskey and gin, but wine is where we started and it remains a driving force for us. We have a stellar cocktail and award winning wine list, written with precision and love.

Good For – The Legal Eagle is ideal for business lunches, casual dinners, private dining, and relaxed celebrations with friends.

WHERE TO FIND US

SUSTAINABILITY

The Winding Stair Group and Valence Hospitality actively support policies, initiatives, and companies dedicated to improving climate action. Together, they back several programmes, the most significant being their ongoing commitment to Self Help Africa, an organisation that does incredibly meaningful work with farming communities in Kenya and Uganda. What we admire about Self Help Africa's approach is their focus on long-term change. Vegetable gardens, water points, school meal programmes – these are the small, practical actions that enable families to eat better, keep children in school, and help communities grow stronger.

We're proud to support Open Hive, a local bee conservation project committed to maintaining biodiversity and reducing environmental impact, specifically aiming to help the native Irish honeybee re-establish itself in the Irish ecosystem.

Alongside continued efforts to recycle, compost food waste, and implement intuitive, greener kitchen equipment, we are dedicated to supporting many small, organic, and artisan producers. We are proud members of Eurotoques, a community of chefs, producers, and artisans dedicated to preserving Irish culinary heritage.

Some examples of suppliers doing excellent work include sourcing coffee from women-owned or managed farms and cooperatives, supporting organisations that promote gender equality, and using wine from fully recyclable kegs, which reduce carbon emissions by half and use 94% less packaging as part of a closed-loop system.

For specific lists of suppliers and more details on the remarkable work these companies undertake, please contact us for further information.
