How to claim your dissertation remuneration

This version is from August 27, 2025

All PhD candidates who provide the University Library with a free license for non-exclusive publication of the dissertation in electronic form, if necessary with a temporary publication embargo, are entitled to a Dissertation Remuneration of € 500. This bonus can be used to compensate for part of the following expenses:

- Printing and editing of the manuscript;
- Costs for renting suitable clothing for the defense;
- Reception costs.

The remuneration can also be used to cover other costs. The PhD candidate does not have to declare the expenses to claim the remuneration.

License agreement

To apply for the reimbursement, the PhD candidate can download the 'license agreement' through Hora Finita, same page where the candidate uploads the final dissertation to the library (see manual, p. 135). The agreement will be signed by the candidate and the library. Please attach the document when applying for the dissertation remuneration. It is not necessary to upload additional receipts.

How to claim your dissertation remuneration:

- Non-employees at Vrije Universiteit can use the reimbursement form at <https://vu.nl/en/about-vu/more-about/claims-for-non-staff-members>. Make sure to mention H/261020.003 (GS Ondersteuning) in your claim.
- PhD candidates with an employment contract need to process their expense claim through SAP Concur. Please select the app 'claims' in your VU dashboard (<https://vu.nl/en/employee/declarations-and-commute-allowance/reimbursement-of-expenses-for-internal-employees> > click the blue button 'take action now' > 'open self-service' > Expense > Create new report). Under 'cost object type' select '(PJ) Project WBS element' and under 'cost object type' select '(H/261020.003) GS Ondersteuning'.

Questions?

More information about uploading your dissertation can be found on the VU library website: <https://vu.nl/en/about-vu/divisions/university-library>
