

Guided by our core values – open, personal and responsible – we work together towards a better world. We nurture societal dialogue, conduct leading research, and educate global citizens who contribute to a better world.

Our unique position

We are an emancipatory university, strong in health and broad in terms of disciplines – all on one campus in the city, where we bring together education, research and valorisation.

Free thinkers

We're a community of free thinkers: independent, critical and engaged. We take responsibility for people, society and planet, and for each other.

Global citizenship

We educate global citizens who contribute to a better world, in both word and deed. Locally rooted and internationally connected.

Our strategy focuses on three domains where we make an impact. That's how we contribute to a better – healthy, sustainable and just – world, in both word and deed.

Health and well-being

As the largest in health and well-being, we bring together education, research and care. From prevention to treatment, we work towards a healthy society for everyone.

Climate and environment

We connect disciplines and develop solutions to climate and environmental challenges. From science to society, we work towards sustainable solutions for a liveable planet.

Justice and resilience

We help to build a just and resilient society. Through our education and research, we contribute to equal opportunities and inclusion.
